A first impression

Set across 7,830 sqm of land in Antiparos, Cycladic Reverie is a private stone estate surrounded by mature olive trees, established gardens and pathways leading towards the sea. An old stone press at the heart of the grounds preserves the property's agricultural heritage, giving the estate a character rarely found in contemporary island residences.

The main house combines traditional stonework with generous, light-filled interiors. A living room with fireplace, spacious kitchen and dining area, three bedrooms and a dedicated office provide a considered layout for extended stays and year-round enjoyment. An independent guesthouse offers additional accommodation for family and guests.

Outside, the swimming pool, mature trees and expansive grounds create an exceptional setting for private entertaining and unhurried island living. The scale of the estate offers both space and seclusion, while its architectural character remains rooted in the landscape rather than competing with it.

Antiparos has become a discreet destination for international buyers seeking privacy, architectural authenticity and a more understated side of the Cyclades. With its traditional village, clear-water beaches and relaxed pace, the island retains a distinctive appeal. Cycladic Reverie offers the opportunity to own a substantial estate in one of the Aegean's most sought-after island settings.
