Una prima impressione

Across the broad white bands of the façade, every balcony is a small garden, and a column of timber louvres rises beside them like a tree trunk, letting the green spill down. In Palaio Faliro, on the third and fourth floors, Cozy has a front door on each level and opens onto a double-height living room, where the eye climbs two storeys before it finds the ceiling. The renderings dress it in the tones of an autumn afternoon: warm oak, travertine, a soft sage green and touches of terracotta. Three bedrooms, two bathrooms and a guest WC, a second sitting room with a kitchenette for guests or quiet work, two parking spaces and a storage room. Four balconies, 47.5 m² in all; on the two largest, facing west, the late light turns to honey and stays until dinner. A home that wraps around whoever walks in, like a wool sweater.

Palaio Faliro is the first neighbourhood of the Athens Riviera after the city: a marina, a seafront promenade and the Stavros Niarchos Foundation Cultural Center within minutes, with Syntagma and Piraeus about half an hour away. It is lived in all year rather than seasonally, and it pairs city life with everyday access to the sea. That balance supports steady demand from both owner-occupiers and tenants.

A primary residence for anyone who needs separate levels: one for daily family life, one for guests or working from home. Someone who wants the city centre and the sea in the same routine. And a buyer looking for a home in a new building close to the city as a long-term holding.
