Ein erster Eindruck

On the fifth floor the street has fallen away and the sky has come closer: here the summer morning light enters through the large east-facing balcony and stretches all the way to the kitchen. The building rises in broad sand-toned bands, planted at every level beside a column of timber louvres. This 123 m² residence in Palaio Faliro gathers around an open living room with an island kitchen. Three bedrooms, the master with its own bathroom and a planted balcony, a second bathroom, a laundry space, and three balconies, almost 40 m² in all. The renderings propose warm oak, pale stone and linen curtains. A parking space under the building and a storage room. A home that keeps a little of August's light inside it, all year round.

Palaio Faliro is the first neighbourhood of the Athens Riviera after the city: a marina, a seafront promenade and the Stavros Niarchos Foundation Cultural Center within minutes, with Syntagma and Piraeus about half an hour away. It is lived in all year rather than seasonally, and it pairs city life with everyday access to the sea. That balance supports steady demand from both owner-occupiers and tenants.

A primary residence with three bedrooms in a new building, close to the sea, the marina and the city centre. Anyone who wants a master suite and balconies on every side. And a long-term letting in a neighbourhood that lives all year.
